

CHICAGO UNION STATION

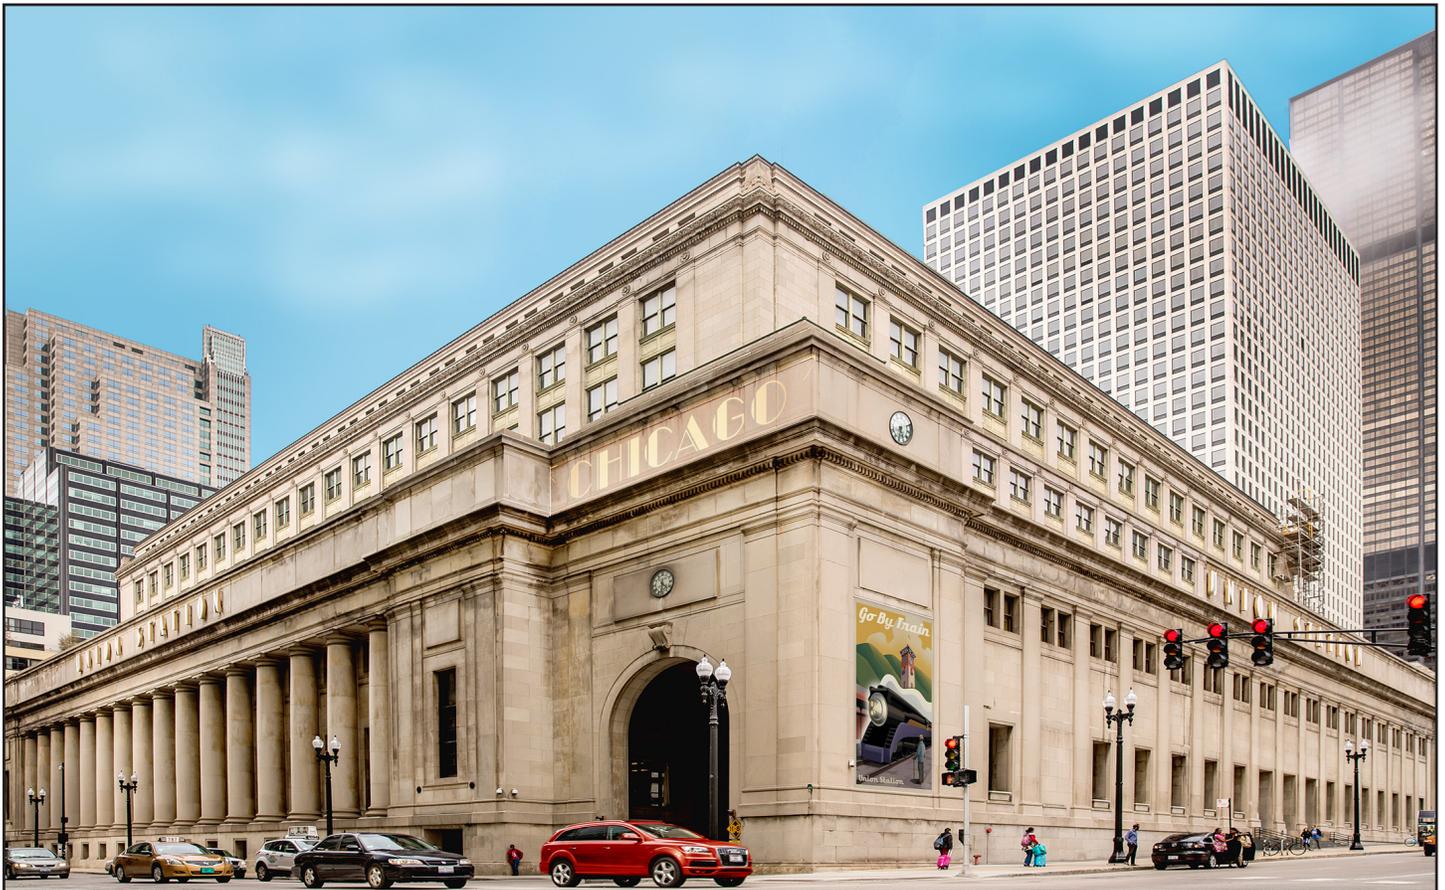

Chicago Union Station is a national railroad hub and a famous Chicago landmark. It's the only "double-stub" station in the US, where the 24 tracks approach from two directions and most do not continue under or through the station. In the station's Great Hall, you'll see two sculptures – one represents "Day" (holding a rooster) and the other represents "Night" (holding an owl), in recognition that railroads run 24 hours a day.

Together with the approach and storage tracks, the entire station facility takes up nearly 10 city blocks. Chicago is also known for the Chicago River, which is dyed green every St. Patrick's day, the Shedd Aquarium, Chicago Cubs baseball and of course, deep-dish pizza!
